Fatmata Koroma is too young to understand what poverty is. But she knows that she can only eat once in day because that is what her mother can provide for her and the rest of the family. Her mother is a subsistent farmer eking a living from tilling a rather impossible land. Fatmata's community has no school, no health facility, no good road, and no electivity and most important has no good and safe shelters. She is a Christian by faith and a Limba by tribe Sponsorship. Their income annually is about 174, will contribute to make a great difference in her life.
